Planning permission granted for Cambridge Cancer Research Hospital

We welcome yesterday's planning committee decision, after councillors approved our plans to build Cambridge Cancer Research Hospital on the Cambridge Biomedical Campus.

The new specialist research hospital will be the first of its kind for the East of England, and will transform the lives of the millions of people diagnosed with cancer.

Cambridge Cancer Research Hospital will bring together NHS staff from Addenbrooke's Hospital and world-leading scientists from the University of Cambridge and its Cancer Research UK Cambridge Centre, all under one roof.

We are continuing to work closely with our partners and the local planning authority to ensure we balance the needs of a new hospital development, against the wider growth and infrastructure requirements for Cambridge, both of which are important to our staff, patients and the local community.

You can read more on Cambridge Cancer Research Hospital's website here.
